

Our History

Big Kidz Foundation, the philanthropic vision of Outkast member Antwon "Big Boi" Patton, is a non-profit entity designed to prepare children for challenges they may face in the world intellectually. Established in 2006, with the idea that humanities could positively affect literacy, mathematics, public speaking, and artistic inclinations is the foundation's vision.

"Creating and having a positive contribution in the world we're living in, takes knowledge to another level, takes expression to another level, and I want to be a part of making that happen." ~Big Boi

Big Boi, of the Grammy Award winning duo Outkast, has had an enjoyable tenure in the music business and attributes the success of this group to their originality and non-traditional creativity. With this in mind, his goal is to take education and knowledge to another dimension.
